

Creatures of Darkness: Raymond Chandler, Detective Fiction, and Film Noir

More than any other writer, Raymond Chandler (1888-1959) is responsible for raising detective stories from the level of pulp fiction to that of literature. Philip Marlowe - his cynical, hard-boiled private eye - set the standard for rough, brooding heroes with a strong sense of honour despite living in an unfair world. Like Ian Flemings James Bond, Marlowe has lived beyond his creators works, appearing in radio and television shows and in numerous film adaptations. Chandlers seven novels, including The Big Sleep (1939) and The Long Goodbye (1953), with their pessimistic view of life and stark, grim realism, had a direct influence upon the emergence of film noir. In addition to the novels, Chandler wrote short stories and penned the screenplays for several films, including Double Indemnity (1944) and Strangers on a Train (1951). This is a biocritical study of the works of Raymond Chandler. It explores Chandlers unpublished script for Lady in the Lake, examines the differences in the American and British releases of Strangers on A Train, discusses the merits of the unproduced screenplay for Playback and compares Howard Hawks directors cut of The Big Sleep with the version shown in cinemas. The author offers an insight into the genius of Chandler and the power of his vision to transcend the constraints of a single art form.
