

Mrs Catherine Gladstone: A Woman Not Quite of Her Time

Catherine Glynne was born in 1812, in the same year as Charles Dickens. An earls daughter she married the son of a self-made merchant, William Ewart Gladstone, who became Queen Victorias Prime Minister on four occasions. While the Queen and the PM loathed each other, they both loved Catherine, Gladstones wife. After a long and indecisive courtship, Gladstone said of his new wife that my Cathie forever twinkles. Society remarked that her beauty showed a profound intelligence. Catherine loved being in the main stream of action but disliked politicians, fashion and social niceties. Unusual for the time Gladstone was present at the birth of each of their eight children and Catherine insisted on feeding them herself. Mrs Gladstones primary concern was support of the poor in particular those suffering from cholera, near-starving mill girls and homeless orphans. She established the concept of free convalescent homes and her common-sense influenced the Poor Laws. To maintain her genius for charity she took every opportunity to approach Gladstones friends for financial support for her good works. In return she found places for her husbands rescue women young girls forced into prostitution as a result of poverty. When her brothers ironworks failed Catherine and her family faced poverty. It was Gladstones financial skills that saved the family from bankruptcy. Catherine died on 14th June, 1900. Pertinent to this biography is the letter the author wrote to the Church Times about the reasons behind the riots in London and elsewhere in the United Kingdom, in August 2011. The letter header Mrs Gladstone! thou shouldst be living at this hour drew attention to a personality who in her time confronted severe social need through community action (the letter text is reproduced on the Press website).

) was the wife of British Through the myriad strains and links in her heredity, Catherine found herself, according to Masterman, related in Mary Gladstone (Mrs. Drew): Her Diaries and Letters. New office, President of the Womens Liberal Federation